Weaving a high-energy, live rock performance with testimony of the artists' life lessons on finance, two bands, GOODING and Carter Hulse and the band Me Like Bees, visit Nebraska August 27-31 to share with students how financial literacy and being purposeful enable them to make dreams realities. The Nebraska Council on Economic Education (NCEE) coordinates and secures sponsors for the bands to visit eight Nebraska schools including Wilcox-Hildreth Public School.

After the concert, the band talks to students about the importance of saving, how compound interest works, why to stay away from payday lenders, and how making wise financial decisions can help a person fulfill one's dreams.
